Onora O'Neill (2009): Trusting intelligently?

The central problem in thinking about trust is that it can be misplaced: the trustworthy may be mistrusted, and the untrustworthy may be trusted. Both sorts of mismatch lead to practical anxiety as well as intellectual complexity. When we refuse to trust the trustworthy we incur needless worry and cost in trying to check them out and hold them to account, while those who find their trustworthiness wrongly questioned may feel undermined, even insulted — and ultimately less inclined to be trustworthy ...the central practical aim in placing and refusing trust is to do so well, that is to align the placing of trust with trustworthiness. The central practical question is how we can place trust intelligently, despite the inevitable incompleteness of evidence (O'Neill, O. Perverting Trust, Ashby Lecture, May 15th 2009: 1).

Political charge

- My time in prison has made me angry.
- The prison authorities are guiltier than I am for wrongdoing.
- I feel more like fighting back in this prison.
- I dislike this prison's treatment of people like me.
- I feel shame for what I have done to get here.
- The level of suspicion in this prison is too high.
- I have become more tolerant of (other) faith groups in this prison.
- The problems we are facing in this prison need action now.
- I have seen things happen to other prisoners in here that are simply wrong.
- I accept that there is a reason for me being here

Key message

- Empirical differences in levels of trust in prison have major consequences for life in those prisons.
  - Trust is not as hard to grow it as we seem to think.
